*Course Instructors:
Professor Victor Wong, Mr Toby Yip,

This course focuses on promoting a cross-disciplinary understanding of life-career planning and service leadership, drawing implications for personal development as well as applications for serving deprived youth in the community. It aims to offer an informative and accessible guide for students to engage in meaningful service projects during their studies and to pursue career fulfillment in the future.

When Work Can be Happy and Meaningful

Career development is about pursuing and integrating happiness, meaning and achievement. Students, together with a "Serious Interest Devotee" (職趣達人), will work in small groups to design and provide a community activity or event for young people in Hong Kong, which is related to the service area of interest development, self-understanding and/or career pursuits. Service and fulfillment thus go hand in hand, which both lead to career satisfaction.
